Dear Papang,

Although my one and only condition to join the company was rejected, I still would like to continue to look for an avenue in the hope that I will be understood.

I would like to propose then that we ask the Chinese Temple if my condition is unreasonable and that if it will cause chaotic consequences, as you believed or it will be good for the company.

I wait eagerly for your decision on this matter.

Your son,

Alex

P.S. I think Nelson should have konting delikadesa of not writing your letter for you because I feel I would receive almost the same letter-content if I send directly to him my letter to you and he replies even without communicating with you.

Attached is a copy of the way he wants to be in the middle of the family problems which I find disturbing and not of any help.

I think other writers who will not benefit from what-looks-like-a-father-plan-to-push-out-his-eldest-son-out-of-the-family-corporation can help you write to explain that all your previous actions and decisions regarding your eldest son does not have the colors of looks-like-a-father-plan-to-push-out-his-eldest-son-out-of-the-family-corporation or that of when-a-father-is-being-sideline-by-the-success-of-his-eldest-son.

Or pwede man tu escribe comigo na chavacano.
