Las Piñas to create own 'greenbelt'

Las Piñas City Mayor Vergel "Nene" Aguilar has ordered all City Hall officials, employees as well as teachers and students in public schools to plant a tree or bamboo plant that will help create a "greenbelt" area in the city.

An Executive Order Aguilar recently issued by the mayor mandates the more than 3,000 City Hall officials and employees, officers, faculty and students in all of the city's elementary, high schools, colleges and the soon-to-open information technology school, to plant a tree or bamboo each to be grown and nurtured to create a green park to help reduce air pollution and mitigate the adverse effects of global warming.

Aguilar said each enrollee in all of the city's public schools starting this school year should be required to care for and nurture a tree or bamboo plant until they graduate.

With this, the city expects to have about 16,000 full-grown trees and bamboo in the next five years.

The tree seedlings and bamboos will be provided by the city government in coordination with the office of Rep. Cynthia Villar, who spearheaded various environmental projects such as the "Sagip Ilog program" and greening of Las Piñas, among others.

Aguilar declared waterways, riverbanks and open spaces in the city as greenbelt areas and created an inter-agency committee to oversee the implementation of the greenbelt program.

The committee is led by Councilor Leopoldo Benedicto as chairman, and includes representatives from the Sagip Ilog project, Federation of Homeowner's Association, Parents-Teachers Association president, Environmental Sanitation Center, Engineering Office, the local Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Department of Agriculture, Department of Education, Department of Interior and Local Government.

There will be a simultaneous citywide clean-up on April 25 in celebration of Earth Day. Aguilar will lead the cleaning of open spaces, dredging of waterways and canals, and start the planting of trees and bamboos in various common areas identified for such purpose.

"We enjoy everyone's cooperation in keeping our environment clean and safe, not only to delay or prevent the serious effects of global warming but to provide our residents a livable city," Aguilar said.

Shutterbugs invade Manila Zoo

By EVELYN MACAIRAN

About 200 professional and enthusiast photographers gathered at the Manila Zoological and Botanical Garden yesterday to help drum up support for the conservation of the animal park.

Karl Orteza, Pinoy Photographers Organization (PiPho) spokesman, said they have decided to hold PiPho Zoolfest 08 at the Manila Zoo in a bid to promote the park and to ensure that it would not be torn down.

Sometime last year, a city government official and a congressman suggested that a commercial center or a basketball coliseum be put up at the location of the decades-old zoo. Orteza said they do not support this proposal.

"Through the PiPho Zoolfest 08 we hope to promote the conservation of the Manila Zoo and reiterate its significance as a landmark in the city" and a favorite tourist spot, he said.

Orteza added that Canon, one of their main sponsors, announced plans to donate birds to the zoo and help improve the aviary section.

Members of the photography club went around the 5.5-hectare park in search of "subjects" for their pictures. "We are not just looking for interesting pictures but we are looking for subjects that tells a story or an image of the Manila Zoo," Orteza said.

Selected pictures will be turned over to zoo officials and used to liven up the surroundings and make it more attractive to visitors.

They also held an on-the-spot contest wherein they would select the pictures that show off the park's best assets, particularly the animals.

Orteza said that with an average of 8,000 people trooping to the zoo during weekends, he is certain they would not run out of good subjects.

Winners of the contest would receive prizes from Canon, gift certificates from other sponsors, and be entitled to attend a seminar at the Philippine Center for Creative Imaging.
